

Birds Found on the Arctic Slope of Northern Alaska

Excerpt: ...Except for a few birds around edges of open bodies of water, the great bulk of red phalaropes was (Aug. 7, 1951) on the Arctic Ocean. On September 11, there was none at Point Barrow. Thomas Brower, a resident at Barrow Village, stated that he had never before seen this species congregate on the Arctic Ocean bordering the shore. Lobipes lobatus (Linnaeus): Northern phalarope.
