

An Anti-environmentalist Manifesto

Classic, clear-headed libertarian analysis of how the environmental movement had devolved into a new religion. Rothbard uses numerous examples to show how attacks on attacks by environmentalists on science and capitalism are based on irrational and anti-factual fears. Long before attacks on GMOs and fracking, Rothbard was analyzing the actual agenda of environmentalists: a coercive utopianism rooted in the same statism that brought us the Soviet Union and Communist China. Like socialism, environmentalism combines an atheistic religion with virulent statism. But it ups the ante. Marxism at least professed a concern with human beings; environmentalism harks back to a godless, manless, and mindless Garden of Eden. 61 pages.
